

Creation Myth Final Draft

The Four Witches creation story

There once was four sisters Witches. North, South, East and West. They lived for an eternity, until they could create harmony and link their magic. They all had different powers, but when they worked together they created Earth. Everything was split evenly into fours. The witch of the North used her breath to create the sky and its planets. She whirled her hands around the sun. By a click of her finger she made the stars, and with a whistle she made the Heavens about.

The sisters liked the look of the planet Earth. They wanted it to be their special place. They made themselves small and walked on the planet.

Using their powers together. The West and the Witch of North made: sky's, Planets and Heavens. As magical as her sisters the Eastern Witch brought to life All living things. Every perfect plant, amazing animal and headstrong humans was made by her dainty hands.

The South Witch created the seasons; Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. With the change of the seasons came the change of her hair. It changed as the season did. In spring it was the colour of the bark of the trees, Summer saw her hair turn sunshine yellow. In autumn her hair was red like the falling leaves and in winter it was white as snow.

The West witch designed the patterns of the water on the land. She looks after the sea animals and controls the tides. The four witches used their magic to create the compass to remind humans who made them. Balance, Harmony and kindness to all living things, should be how humans should live by.
